D.C. BART Extension Plan Ires City Council

By NANCY STANCILL

A just-released plan by the Bay Area Rapid Transit District to construct a "tail track" parallel to a one-mile stretch of Daly City's Junipero Serra Boulevard redevelopment area has the Daly City Council anxious and angry.

The City Council, which also acts as the Daly City Redevelopment Agency, expressed concern about the BART proposal at agency and council meetings Monday.

Mayor William J. Schumacher said city officials were informed of BART's construction plans late last week.

City officials looked over a brief press release from BART which said, "As a further step toward improving train service, BART is planning to construct a short extension of track beyond the Daly City station to improve train turn-back capabilities."

The BART statement said the "tail track" would extend 6,000 feet beyond the station at John Daly Boulevard and would provide "storage space for extra off-peak trains which now have to be taken back to the East Bay for storage."

"I see this as a car barn without a barn," Councilman Anthony Giammona said. "We should take a position on this. We may not be able to stop it but we should get our input in early."

Councilman James Tucker stated, "The foregone conclusion that BART is making is what angers me. We have little or no say in this. They are 'piecemealing' us down the road to get to the airport."

San Mateo County is not one of the three counties which participate in the Bay Area Rapid Transit District, but, according to state law, BART can exercise eminent domain in construction outside the district, Schumacher said.

Schumacher said he is worried about the impact the project would have on Daly City's redevelopment plans.

The proposed "tail track" would be east of and parallel to Junipero Serra Boulevard, which, along with Mission Street, comprises the redevelopment area.

The mayor said that according to BART's preliminary plan, there would be three tracks branching into five beyond School Street. The "tail track" would go from John Daly Boulevard to Washington Street in unincorporated Colma, according to Schumacher.

City officials said BART representatives have not estimated the cost or the timetable of the project.

"This is going to create emotion that will be heard all the way to the BART station," said Councilman Albert Teglia of city residents' reactions.

Several councilmen expressed concern that the "tail track" would create noise problems for residents living near Junipero Serra Boulevard. Schumacher noted the plans indicate a possible realignment of Westlake Avenue and Parkview.

Schumacher directed City Attorney Albert Polonsky to study the city's legal position in regard to the expansion and appointed himself and Councilman Victor Kyriakis to meet further with BART officials.

Redevelopment staff planner Don Ciucci said the plan "definitely changes the configuration of Junipero Serra Boulevard regarding redevelopment," but added that the proposal does not necessarily preclude commercial development. He explained that if the city obtained "air rights," construction of

'Normal As Everyone Else!'

Pacifican Adjusts To Fading World

By TERRY DAVENPORT

A simple task like finding a safety pin dropped on the floor has become very difficult for Patricia Bagshaw of Pacifica.

As a side effect of diabetes, Ms. Bagshaw, 32, is losing her sight. She has been legally blind four years.

Ms. Bagshaw wasn't prepared for the transition she would have to make.

"I didn't know anything about people who aren't fully sighted. I had the old stereotype that if a person can't see, that person can't do much," she explained.

(Dave Dornias Photo)

PATRICIA BAGSHAW

Gradually losing her sight.

Now she wants to scream from the rooftops: "Hey! You can be blind and still be as normal as everyone else!"

Losing her sight was particularly devastating to Ms. Bagshaw because she loved to read and paint.

"I'm a perfectionist," she said, "I didn't just paint. I did very, very detailed paintings."With a degree in design, she dreamed of opening a firm that would sculpt elaborate settings for parties and weddings.

"I would do the clothes, food, decorations — everything."

Ms. Bagshaw is attending Skyline College, learning to cope with her limited vision. She's looking for a new field in which to pour her creative energy and, frankly, she's frustrated by the few options she has.

"I thought about going into a master's program in counseling, but the college I want to attend isn't even accepting applications until next January," she said.

Large chunks of her time are absorbed by waiting for buses, which run at 30-minute intervals in Pacifica except during rush hours.

"If I'm late by one minute and miss the bus, there's no way I can get to an appointment on time," she pointed out.

Ms. Bagshaw misses the freedom she had when she drove a car. Now instead of getting out and going places on the weekends, she feels confined to her small apartment.

She dislikes having to depend on friends for rides.

"If someone has a family to take care of, why would they want to take on the extra responsibility of giving me a ride?" she asked.

Still, transportation in Pacifica is far better than it was in Tulare, the small Central California town in which she used to live.

"They had no public transportation there except cabs."

Another problem is shopping.

"If I had more money, I could shop at the better stores where the sales people get to know you and can tell you what looks good on you," she said.

Ms. Bagshaw realizes that being well dressed is essential in any professional job.

A fiercely independent person, she resents having to

Building Fees to Climb

Daly City's building division permit fees will go up considerably as a result of an ordinance approved unanimously Monday by the City Council.

The changes, recommended by City Manager David Rowe, will generate an estimated $29,000 in additional revenues.

No one spoke against the increase. Rowe said the fee schedule, which covers five pages, was recommended by the International Conference of Building Officials and by San Mateo County officials.

He said Foster City and San Bruno are considering the same fee schedule.

The new schedule, which covers building, mechanical, plumbing, grading and building condition fees and permits, would raise city charges substantially.

For instance, building permit fees, based on total valuations, would rise as the valuation increases. The current fees, established in 1973, include a $189 charge for a $50,000 valuation. The new fee for that valuation would be $292.

Rowe said the new fees would generate total revenues of $94,000, while building division expenses for the current year will be about $105,950.

In another matter, the council heard a delegation of several women from the Cameo Court area complain that they have been waiting five years for construction of a tot lot.

Linda Vanucci said matters have come to a head this year, since completion of the children's play area by summer has been promised. However, no construction has been started, Mrs. Vanucci said.

Rowe said the divisions have been busy with other construction projects and that the tot lot grading, paving and concrete work must be put out to bid.

He estimated that competitive bidding will take another four to six weeks. Rowe said he would report on the matter June 5.

PTA Completes Project

'Sex' Dolls for the JESD Blind Students

By BILL HURSCHMANN

Jefferson Elementary School District trustees Wednesday night will be presented with three dolls.

While that in itself might seem a bit unusual, the nature of the dolls is even more unusual: They will be used as sex education tools for blind students.

The dolls, a project of the Jefferson Council of PTAs, were constructed by Honey Masters. Since Mrs. Masters began the project last January, nearly 500 hours of labor have gone into it, drafting patterns and actually sewing the three dolls together.

The three dolls consist of a male, one female and one pregnant woman. The pregnant woman comes equipped with, of course, a baby doll.

Alain Zulofsky, the Jefferson district's teacher of the blind, said she is pleased with the results of the project, although she hasn't seen the dolls yet.

"I'm pleased that the PTA recognized the area of development our youngsters need," said Ms. Zulofsky, who works at Daniel Webster School.

"Very often with the blind there are a lot of misconceptions concerning sex education and sexual development and these dolls will help to promote the reality of sex education."

Ms. Zulofsky said the dolls will be used in all aspects of sex education.

"Often there are times during a day when things come up, and on those occasions we will be pulling the dolls out.

"We do have a sex education program now. Beginning at a very young age we must deal with sex education from a physical as well as emotional and social aspect. These dolls will be an asset to our regular program."

The dolls and their sexual organs are made from a polyester quilted fabric.

General Plan

Open Space, Low-Income Housing Views Differ

Sharp differences of opinion on the need for low-income housing and open space areas marked the opening Monday of Daly City's City Council's public hearing on the proposed 1977 general plan.

The proposed plan is a thick set of documents detailing future patters in the city's neighborhoods, economics, public safety needs, redevelopment goals, social needs, housing requirements, seismic safety and other planning elements.

The plan, developed by Ironside and Associates consultants of Oakland and the city staff in conjunction with a citizens Advisory Committee, has been recommended for approval after a lengthy review by the Planning Commission.

After hearing more than two hours of varied public comment Monday night, the City Council continued the public hearing to June 12.

"I thought this evening would never come," Jane Powell, chairman of the committee which developed the plan, said. "It's been three years."

Mrs. Powell said that among the aspects of the proposal "heavily supported" by the citizens' committee were the location of community services at a planned Mission Street multi-purpose center and a fire station for the Bayshore area.

Leroy Franzoia, chairman of the Planning Commission, reported that the commission disagreed with a policy statement by the citizens' committee that fire stations never should be relocated.

However, he said the commission was in total agreement with most of the citizens' committee recommendations. He praised the committee for "a fantastic job."

Tom Adams, a San Mateo County Legal Aid attorney who spoke on behalf of the Save San Bruno Mountain Committee and the Original Daly City Protective Association, generated some comment with some suggestions regarding low-income housing.

He criticized the plan for offering "absolutely no plan to provide 4,000 to 5,000 subsidized housing units that will be needed in Daly City."

Adams suggested that Daly City consider density bonuses, lowered housing amenities, re-evaluation of building codes, creation of a housing authority, and anti-speculation and rent control ordinances as measures that would encourage low-income housing.

However, Serramonte resident Roseann Emerson suggested that higher housing standards to encourage "more executive homes" should be considered instead of emphasizing low-income housing.

She said the city has what amounts to low-cost housing "with 18 people living in one unit" in some instances in Serramonte.

Residents Julius Castelan claimed that Adams, by favoring the plan's proposed open space designation of the San Bruno Mountain Saddle Area, was eliminating a possible location for low-income housing.

He said San Bruno Mountain offers the area's only major undeveloped space for new housing.

The subject of developing the mountain resurfaced as Ron Grudzinski, a representative of Visitacion Associates, expressed the developer's point of view on four areas — Reservior Hill, Visitacion Valley, the Saddle and the northeast ridge — included in the plan.

He requested that the reservoir and valley areas, slated for a combination of open space and residential,

Anti-Crime League Elects New Officers

Daniel M. Gilbrech is the new president of the Anti-Crime League of Daly City.

Gilbrech, of 544 Hanover St., will serve with Frank Karavos, 729 Hanover St., vice president; Knud Knudsen, 158 Acton St., treasurer, and Contrad Pavellas, 62 Theta Ave., secretary.

Diectors include Ralph Damon and Charles Etchison of the Broadmoor Property Owners Association; Karavos and Gilbrech, representing the Crocker Neighborhood Association; Pavellas and Harold Calder of the Original Daly City Protective Association; Elsa Ramos and Les English of the Southern Hills Homeowners Association, and Joseph Keh Jr. and Bernadette Zigalo of the Bayshore Residents Association.

Other directors are Knudsen, who represents senior citizens; Jerome Reitenbach, who represents merchants, and Chris Pallas, Roseann Emerson and Gil Abaja, directors at large.

League officers said Daly City police will be recognized for their roles in fighting crime at an awards and installation ceremony in the future.

WINNERS

Karen Koerpel, of Benjamin Franklin School, and Albert Cruz of John F. Kennedy School, were the two Daly City winners of a district PTA fine arts contest. The youngsters received recognition on the state PTA level for their drawings, which depicted the theme, "Love is . . ."

Why They're Exempt

How Assessor Treats Churches

By DUANE SANDUL

Religious organizations in San Mateo County own land and buildings worth $90 million, according to records of the assessor's office.

Nine churches are worth $1 million or more.

The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of San Francisco is listed as owner of land valued at $11.3 million and buildings worth $21.7 million, research by The Times shows.

Five of the nine "million dollar churches" are Catholic. The full appraised value of the Chapel of the Holy Cross is $3.5 million, by far the tops.

Religious organizations own 358 developed and vacant parcels which are exempted from paying property taxes.

Portions of properities which are not used for religious purposes are appraised at one-fourth of their full value, the same as residents and businesses.

These usually include rectories and caretaker homes.

Religious organizations paid about $11.6 million in property taxes for 1977-78 in San Mateo County.

They were held exempt on full land and improvement values of $88 million. That represents about $190 million in "saved" taxes.

Most churches in San Mateo County list their officers or church as owner of property and buildings.

The Archdiocese was listed as the largest owner by far, followed by the Presbytery of San Francisco, which makes loans to local churches for building funds.

The Presbytery was listed as owning improvements valued at $1.4 million and property at $440,000. But that does not include the denomination's three largest churches in Menlo Park, San Mateo and Burlingame.

Church exemption records compiled by the assessor's exemption division contain a bevy of information, much of which would delight a statistics buff.

Million Dollar Churches

1. Chapel of the Holy Cross	Colma	$3,514,800
2. Holy Cross Greek Orthodox	Belmont	1,500,000
3. First Presbyterian	Burlingame	1,435,400
4. St. Pius Catholic	Redwood City	1,119,000
5. All Souls Catholic	South City	1,063,200
6. Church of Jesus Christ LDS	Pacifica	1,041,600
7. Holy Angels Catholic	Colma	1,029,400
8. Menlo Park Presbyterian	Menlo Park	1,023,900
9. Our Lady of Angels Catholic	Burlingame	1,001,200

The "million dollar" churches after the Chapel of the Holy Cross are: Church of the Holy Cross, a Greek orthodox church in Belmont, $1.5 million; First Presbyterian Church in Burlingame, $1,435,400; St. Pius Catholic Church in Redwood City, $1,119,000; All Souls Catholic Church in South San Francisco, $1,063,200; Church of Jesus Christ Latter-day Saints in Pacifica, $1,041,600; Holy Angels Catholic Church in Colma, $1,029,400; Menlo Park Presbyterian Church , $1,023,900; and, Our Lady of Angels Catholic Church in Burlingame, $1,001,200.

Narrowly missing "million dollar" status are St. Bartholomew's and St. Matthew's in San Mateo, and Olivet Memorial Park Cemetery Chapel in Colma.

Records also show that religious organizations own about $3.4 million in what the assessor calls "personal property," such as pews, organs, pianos and fixtures. Most of them are tax exempt too.

Voter Registration Jumps in County

Impressive increases in voter registration this year indicate a big voter turnout in the June 6 primary election, County Clerk-Recorder Marvin Church said Friday.

The total number of registered voters is 289,575, Church announced. This represents a substantial gain in San Mateo County from the previous low of 243,068 in the Presidential Primary of 1976.

Church said there was an 18 percent increase in voter signups for the Democratic Party, 10 percent for the Republican Party.

The following is a breakdown of the total number of citizens registered to vote in the primary:

— Democratic, 162,399
— Republican, 100,246
— American Independent, 2,395
— Peace and Freedom, 780
— Non-partisan, 23,415
— Miscellaneous, 340

Voter registration in the non-partisan category nearly doubled this year, said Church.

"With increases in registration, controversial ballot propositions and many contested offices, we should have a big turnout on June 6," Church said.

Your Reassessment Can Be Appealed

By DUANE SANDUL

No one likes fungus in the bathrooms or cracks in the driveway, but for a Woodside man those conditions kept money in his pocket.

Motorcycles zooming up a hillside generate a nuisance to a Menlo Park couple but it saved them money.

Termites gnawing away at one family's Burlingame home are not a cause for joy — but they are a cause of savings.

These are Peninsulans who have successfully appealed their property tax reassessments.

Each year, hundreds of homeowners and businessmen appeal reassessments. For 1976-77, property owners won reductions totaling more than $600,000.

Not all who engage in the assessment appeals game win, however.

The rules require acceptance by an appraiser, a hearing officer, or a three-member board that property was inaccurately reassessed.

Fewer than 50 percent of those who challenge the assessor are successful.

A Woodside woman said that her home is a converted garage which can barely accommodate two people. But an appeals hearing officer's ruling kept the total appraised value at $120,000.

A Hillsborough woman said she thought that the 1977-78 reassessment of her home to $132,000, an increase of 64.4 percent, was unwarranted.

She said that her home lost its main feature, which she described "as a beautiful panoramic view to the south and east. Now, after 11½ years, our neighbor's trees have completely cut off this view."

She also said that she lives on a fixed income and that her husband died four years ago.

"I cannot afford this drastic tax increase," she pleaded. "I have gone to work full-time to scrape enough to put a necessary roof on the house and to repair the deck, which actually is unsafe to walk on.

"I am anxious to keep my home together for my sons and myself, for this is home," she declared in her appeal. "But you are making it absolutely impossible.

"Many of my friends who live in Hillsborough feel I have been unjustly treated and discriminated upon, and have encouraged me to go to whatever means are necessary to get a fair appraisal on my house."

The assessment appeals board in March accepted the ruling by hearing officer Carl Ward that the appeal be denied.

"The application is denied on the basis of comparable sales," Ward ruled. "The applicant states that the house needs a new roof and that there is dryrot on the deck. She also said that a view has been cut off by trees growing up on adjacent property. I believe this is offset by the extra value of a finished basement room and an unfinished area of 1,180 square feet."

Property owners who believe that they can substantiate their claims of an improper assessment for 1978-79 notices, which average a 24 percent increase countywide, can file appeals between July 2 and Sept. 15.

Thereafter, three hearing officers, each paid $100 per day, will begin nine months of weekly appeal hearings. Their recommendations are passed to the three-member Assessment Appeals Board.

That board, whose members also receive $100 per day, ratifies or modifies the recommendation of hearing officers, and conducts hearings itself on appeals which bypassed hearing officers.

The members are Emilio Massolo, William Feeney and Perry Bygdnes. They are appointed by county supervisors.

Successful appeals prove one or more of these factors:

• The assessor's value exceeds recent sale prices of their or comparable properties.

• The assessor's value is not justified by income which the property produces (this is cited by office building owners and apartment houses).

• Buildings are damaged, demolished or incomplete on March 1 of the year of the reassessment.

Most successful appeals are ones which the assessor's appraisers stipulate to because the property owners shows building damage which the appraiser's cursory inspection, or the paperwork trending, failed to consider.

"Stipulations are after a characteristic which we weren't aware of is shown, or after an obvious error on our part," said Assessor Jack Estes.

Less successful are appeals which try to prove that the assessor's value exceeds recent sale price of comparable properties.

However, there are property owners who do win those battles.

For example, a prominent Hillsborough resident earlier this year won a reduction of his 1977-78 reassessment from $500,000 in appraised value to $360,000. The board accepted his evidence that the assessor's value exceeded recent sale prices of comparable homes.

But most homeowners who successfully demonstrate the equalization approach do so with county assessors in the form of stipulations.

The Post recently examined the 696 appeals filed for 1977-78 reassessments. They involved, as of May 1, 214 stipulated reductions and only 49 reduced by hearing officers and/or the appeals board.

Nearly 100 appeals were withdrawn for a variety of reasons.

Hearing officers and the board had denied 151, including those appeals in which the applicant failed to appear at the scheduled hearing.

Hearings on other cases are pending.

Eunice Brecht, clerk to the appeals board, said that 470 appeals were filed for 1976-77, well below the record filing of 1,189 for reassessments in 1975-76.

Assessor Estes gave a statistical look at the outcome of the 1976-77 appeals, and what they meant in terms of dollars.

The 470 protests appealed the assessments of 519 parcels. Of those, 344 appeals were considered, with 215 stipulated reductions and 63 reductions granted by the board or hearing officers.

"The assessed value of properties appealed was $87,117,713," Estes said. "The assessed value reductions totaled $6,738,912, of which $4,196,604 was stipulated."

And what does that mean in hard dollars?

"You're looking at $9 per $100 of assessed value in tax dollars," Estes said, "or $90,000 per $1 million."

That figures to slightly more than $603,000 in actual property tax dollar reductions.

The appraised value of a home is the figure which the assessor tags as the full market value. The assessed valuaton, used for taxing purposes, is one-fourth of the appraised value.

Analyst Sees Big Job Ahead for Legislature

The state Legislature will have to get right to work this June if Proposition 13 passes, William G. Hamm, the state's legislative analyst, told members of the Governmental Research Council of San Mateo County Friday.

Prop. 13, the Jarvis-Gann Initiative, is designed to cut back the amount of property tax that may be collected. Prop. 8 is the Legislature's response on property tax relief. Prop. 13 would reduce property taxes by more than 50 percent, Prop. 8 by 30 percent.

Hamm told the GRC that the Legislature will have to work quickly if Prop. 13 passes or if both Prop. 13 and Prop. 8 fail.

If Prop. 8 is the voters' choice, ready-made property tax legislation will go into effect, he said, and the Legislature will not have to rush.

But if Prop. 13 passes, the analyst said, members of the Assembly and Senate will have to figure out how to apportion the state's property tax income among 6,300 local jurisdictions.

Hamm repeatedly said he would not predict which way the voters will ballot in June, and declared that he is not taking a stand on either ballot measure.

The 35-year-old former economist for the U.S. Office of Management and Budget said it would be "very hard for the Legislature to harmonize the demands on it if Prop. 13 passes."

He said passage of Prop. 13 will reduce local governmental income from property tax sources by about 57 percent, and cut total local government income about 40 percent, on the average.

It will have virtually no effect on state spending, he said.

Over the long run, he said, if Prop. 13 passes, businesses will enjoy greater tax benefits than homeowners, because businesses are sold less frequently and assessments could only be raised when they are sold.

Hamm said the state's budget surplus, which has been described as being up to $7 billion, actually is $3.2 billion to $3.3 billion.

The surplus, he said, came about by accident, rather than design.

Over the next five years, that surplus — without any drains — might climb to $11 billion.

Because of this, he said, state spending could continue the same or even grow, whether the Jarvis/Gann initiative passes, or Prop. 8 passes, or the Legislature enacts some other type of property tax reduction.

However, he cautioned, a downward trend in economic growth could easily wipe out the projected surplus.

Hamm insisted "there's no way in the world of being certain" of the effects of either proposition.

"There are so many unknowns in there that I feel uncomfortable.

"We could be looking back in five years and saying what a wonderful thing we did," he said, "or we could be looking back and saying how dumb we were.

'DIFFERENT THAN WHAT I PICTURED'

Commissioner commented on viewing Daly City site.

Development Walking Tour Helps in Decision-Making

A delegation of Daly City planning commissioners, city staffers, developers' representatives and a few residents recently braved the cold Serramonte area winds to walk over the site of a proposed condominium project.

The project, known as Serramonte Highlands, will be scrutinized by the Planning Commission June 13. As proposed by Damavandi Enterprises Inc. and Frumenti Development Corp. of Los Altos, it would consist of 260 condominium units on a 14.5 acre site.

The site, located between Interstate 280 and Hampshire Avenue north of Verducci Court, was the object of the 45-minute "walk" last week.

"It's going to look just like that," said Serramonte homeowner Roseann Emerson, pointing across the freeway to an area of dense apartment development.

Mrs. Emerson and other members of the Serramonte Homeowners Association have opposed the development proposal, as well as two other condominium projects recently approved by the Planning Commission.

Planning commissioner Richard Silver, Leroy Franzoia and Edward O'Donnell, who walked the site, expressed surprise at its size.

"It's different than what I pictured," Franzoia said. "It looks fairly level."

The site, long and sloping, showed several tiers of land sloping down toward the freeway.

Tom Miller, the city's acting city planner, said the purpose of the scheduled walk was "to show how the property sits on the land."

He said a group walk was scheduled a few months ago on the adjacent Monte Vista condominium development, which later won approval from the Planning Commission. The Monte Vista plan will go before the City Council June 1.

"We are trying to get familiar with the slopes and the limitations of the land," Miller said. "It's difficult to look at the plans on paper and visualize it."

Miller said developemnts in the past have not undergone team scrutiny because they have not been the object of controversy. He said, however, that most commissioners take the time individually to look at the sites.

The walk attracted the attention of motorcyclists, passing joggers with dogs and a woman strolling with her baby. Since most were Serramonte residents, they stopped to look at the plans the Damavandi representatives were carrying.

The commissioners declined to say whether the walk had influenced how they will view the upcoming preliminary plans.

Mrs. Emerson, however, was not so reticent in expressing her opinion.

"I look at this site that is supposed to house 260 condominiums and I still see 120 executive homes," she said with a merry laugh.

new buildings still could take place.

"I'm trying to keep an open mind," Ciucci said.

However, Charles Turner, chairman of the redevelopment agency's Project Area Committee, did not appear particularly optimistic.

He said the PAC "is committed to maintain the integrity of the redevelopment area" and added that BART's plan "can adversely affect years of work and planning."

Several residents also expressed opposition to the BART "tail track" proposal.

"It would be a distinct menace to the residents of the area," Conrad Pavellas of the Original Daly City Protective Association said.

Plan

be left as "special areas" pending plan review.

Grudzinski objected to the open space designation of the controversial saddle area, which is scheduled to be purchased by the state for park lands. The developer has fought a lengthy legal battle, so far unsuccessfully, for development of the area off Guadalupe Canyon Parkway.

He said that since the land is not in the city, the city should not designate a suggested use in the plan. However, Grudzinski pointed out that he approved of the housing mix suggested for the northeast ridge, another area outside the city.

Paul Hupf, a Daly City attorney, spoke for another developer, Suburban Realty, at the hearing. Hupf, a former city councilman, said the company does not agree with the proposed open space designation of two parcels on Skyline Boulevard, which previously were scheduled for use by Caltrans.

Hupf, who also spoke on behalf of the Lake Merced Golf and Country Club, said the club is unhappy with a proposed open space designation of its total acreage.

He said that although Lake Merced has no plans to develop the land at present, it would lose financial flexibility with that designation, since it would be restricted in borrowing capacity on the property.

"I do hope you will not put us in a box," Hupf said.

depend on readers and tapes to prepare for her college classes.

"If you can get the right tape and have a tape recorder that works, that's great," she noted. Then she explained she had been waiting for two months for the correct tapes and has two broken tape recorders on loan.

"I haven't had a research paper to do yet. The problems associated with that are still ahead," she said.

In sum, Ms. Bagshaw finds that everything is more tiring and takes longer than before.

Nevertheless, she says she is determined to conquer the problems of limited sight and attends a rugged schedule of classes and also tutors other pupils at Skyline College — leaving her only half of one day free during the week.

She also works in the enabler's office at Skyline, helping others, and learning herself, to deal with the problems of various handicaps.

Ms. Bagshaw said she wishes more services were available to people like her. For example, she would like someone to take her shopping and help clean her apartment.

When she drops something on the floor, she sometimes must search for hours to find it while other items often are swallowed up by the vaccum cleaner.

Since transportation is her biggest problem, she wonders why bus companies don't provide better service for the handicapped.

Perhaps most of all, she would like to talk with other people who have limited vision, to learn how they survived the tremendous adjustment period she still is going through.

It was many months after she was legally blind, she explained, before she came in contact with another blind person while arranging for a seeing eye dog.

"You begin to learn from other people what kind of services are available. I still don't know enough to know what to ask for."

Sitting in her sunny apartment amid dozens of healthy plants, Ms. Bagshaw seems to have her life under control. The turmoil does not show on her face.

The secret, she said, is "I trot."

GLENN DEAN

By LUANA JEFFRIES

Congratulations to the new "Student of the Month," Glenn Dean. Glenn certainly deserves this honor. He's a life member of the CSF, a typist/reporter for the school newspaper, a member of the International Club and the salutatorian of the Class of 1978. Glenn is also very active in sports. In fact, his ability to do extremely well in sports contributed greatly toward his being chosen "Student of the Month." He was MVP in cross country in 1976 and 1977, and MVP for tennis in 1977. In 1977 he was co-captain of the tennis team and in 1977-78 was co-captain of the cross country team. He made the All-Northern California first team in cross country. Recently, Glenn broke the record for the most Block J's ever received by anyone. The old record was eight. Glenn now holds 11. Currently, he is vice-president of the Math Club and a member of the South San Francisco-based Conquistadors Drum and Bugle Corps. Glenn also has been accepted at the University of California at Berkeley.

SOME 30 deserving students went on the CSF camping trip May 1, 2 and 3 to Camp Cutter, in the Santa Cruz Mountains. CSF members were rewarded for their academic achievements by joining the yearly camping trip. The two adults who "tended the sheep" were CSF advisor Al Sinor and Counselor Julie Jansen.

Students were given the alternative to sleep indoors or "rough it" in the great outdoors. The majority slept outdoors; a few of the girls slept in the lodge.

During the three-day absence from school, students went swimming in the pool, saw a life-saving demonstration, went canoeing and played softball. Nights were spent primarily at the lodge. Sinor plucked his guitar as the others sang with him. Sinor also performed a magic act and did bird calls.

There were many student presentations. There was a wilderness slide show presented by Ralph "The Mouse" Gowen, a juggling act performed by Glenn Dean, and a dance presentation performed by various CSF'ers, as well as a dance lesson.

The trip was a lot of fun. Of course, there were those silly pranks made during the night. Just ask Ralph Gowen about his ice-filled sleeping bag!

JEFFERSON HIGH'S basketball marathon started on schedule at noon May 12, with coaches Bud Breshnahan and Ken Smith serving as supervisors.

Some of the kids started off full steam ahead to find themselves worn out the next morning. They played games at hour intervals with a three-minute break in between. Not only the guys participated in this marathon. There were some eager girls out there too, ready to play.

The purpose of the marathon was to raise money for the Jefferson High School basketball program.

REDUCE THE HIGH COST OF DYING

The Neptune Society is the intelligent alternative to the more costly, involved mortuary-funeral-cemetery system. After 100 years, it is the answer to America's high cost of dying. The Neptune Society provides a simple, dignified cremation service with scattering on land or sea. There is no need for embalming, cosmetology, casket or graves. Most funerals with casket, grave and other related items will cost $2000 to $5000. The simple Neptune way is approx. $320 (less for members) plus modest area transportation fees. The U.S. Govt. pays $255 cash towards death expenses of persons qualified under social security, working or retired. The thinking person will register today.

'I Don't Know How to Grammar'

Making Basics Interesting

By JANET PARKER

The oldest idea in public school education has become the newest.

Parents are heralding its merits. Educators are looking upon it as if it requires a whole new approach to teaching.

A "back-to-basics" plea has been registered throughout San Mateo County as well as elsewhere in the state. What is being said is that reading, writing and arithmetic are more important than ever and the more they can be emphasized, the better.

Belmont teachers are among those looking for ways to make the old, routine, sometimes boring and often neglected basics more interesting.

Three Belmont teachers recently explained their approaches to some basic subjects at a statewide educators conference in Palo Alto.

When Dorothy Hanlon was a student teacher, she chose grammar for her special project. One of her less-than-enthusiastic students, reacting to a grammar lesson, said, "I don't know how to grammar."

His casual — albeit ungrammatical — remark, became the theme of her approach to one of the most tedious of the basics.

"I really empathize with the kids," said Mrs. Hanlon, an eighth grade teacher at Ralston Intermediate School. Studying grammar can be boring and monotonous, she said.

She uses a "very traditional" grammar textbook but finds she can best get through to her students without ever explaining to them what grammar is.

Her focus is on the practicalities of word usage. For example, instead of telling a student he left out a verb or a subject in an essay sentence, she'll ask him to read the sentence aloud and decide for himself if it sounds right.

"The rules are important, but they aren't the main thing. I don't want them to know the rules if they can't use them," she said.

Many students, Mrs. Hanlon explained, think it's unimportant to put words together properly.

She tries to personalize grammar, which, she admits, is the most dreaded of subjects. Right now, her students are putting together term papers on just about anything that catches their interests — from motorcycles to ballet. In the process, they are learning to use words properly, she said.

She even tries to make a grammar test fun — if that's possible. She uses the names of students and their personal interests in the sentences that students must correct.

On the table at the front of her room are boxes filled with vocabulary words and questions. She's constantly replenishing the boxes with new words for them to spell, define, use and talk about.

Mrs. Hanlon has even designed chess and checker boards incorporating parts of speech into every move.

"I don't care if they ever use the word grammar, as long as they know what it is," she said.

"I'm not here to entertain them but I do want to make grammar less of a drudgery for them."

Youngsters listen to their peers for advice in all sorts of social situations, said Nesbit School teacher Rich Foley. So, why not with reading, too?

Foley has developed a reading program that encourages students to share their reading experiences with their teachers, their parents and their friends.

He said he believes in giving a child the time and the space for silent reading. Children in his classes spend much of their time simply reading books of their own choosing.

"Too often we want kids to read but we don't give them the opportunity," Foley said.

Every day, he meets individually with two or three students for what he calls "celebration reading conferences." He doesn't want his students to give him a book report. Instead, he asks each student to select a favorite section of the book, read it aloud and then talk it over.

"I start probing their comprehension," he said. If he's really successful, he can get the student to talk about why he likes that passage and how it fits into his own life.

Eventually, students demand more "celebration" time, and that leads to group discussions.

"It's neat to hear one student say, 'That sounds interesting. Can I have that book when you're finished?' " Foley said.

He encourages students to read a bit before they go to sleep at night, both because it's relaxing and it's educational. Some parents, he said, complain they can't get their child to turn off the lights at night because he's engrossed in a book. Foley thinks that's great.

Communication also is an important theme of his reading program. He wants his students to tell him if a book is boring, too difficult or too easy.

And he tells them that if they ever want to read the sporting news in the papers or the instructions to repair a motorcycle, they need to read as much as they can now.

Ellen Haas is teaching children the "melody of English."

Any day in her classroom, visitors can see children from first through sixth grade dancing, singing and clapping their hands to the rhythm of words.

It may look as if they are simply having a good time, but there's a great deal of structure involved, too, Mrs. Haas said.

"It's being able to hear the melody, accent and stress point of words," Mrs. Haas said.

She utilizes the Education Through Music system of the Richard's Institute based in Portola Valley. The Fox School teacher has been invited to teach the program at the annual Richard's Institute summer program this year.

Mrs. Haas uses about 150 songs to improve skills in math, language, reading and listening.

The students sing the song, clap to it, dance it, and develop new words and new ideas with it.

They learn to hear the rhythm in their own names, she said. If a youngster can't hear the stress points in words, those words are likely to be jumbled, Mrs. Haas said.

Even a simple, "How are you?" can have different meanings depending upon where the speaker places the stress, the teacher said.

Movement is the key to Mrs. Haas' classroom, but there also are quiet periods before and after the games. The activity also helps capture their attention so they can sit down and really concentrate for five or 10 minutes.

A simple song like "Farmer in the Dell" can be used to talk about adjectives and adverbs. What kind of farmer? Is the farmer happy or sad?

"It's a very social thing. The singing is secondary but it makes them feel relaxed and good about themselves."

It's All My Ex-Wife's Fault

The number of reasons cited for a reduction of reassessments are great, indeed, but perhaps none surpass one filed by a San Mateo man.

"Due to an extensive divorce action, this property has greatly deteriorated while in the possession of my ex-wife," he claimed in his appeal application. "I am currently restoring the house to its former condition."

The man takes his request for a reduction in appraised value from $72,000 to $49,000 to an assessment appeals hearing officer this month.

The Post examined the 696 appeals filed from 1977-78 reassessments. Presented is a sampling of cases which won and cases which lost.

First, some winners:

A Menlo Park man was perhaps miffed to see his new appraised value at $99,000. His house was settling four inches at one end.

A reduction to $78,000 was granted by appraisr John P. Lundquist, who ruled,"Settlement has caused sheetrock cracks in all rooms, together with an uneven floor in the family room."

Another Menlo Park resident was dismayed with his new appraised value of $71,000.

He described his home "as an older home with no fences or lawns, with an old garage . . . the floors slope, there's no stove or kitchen cabinets."

Appraiser James Murphy stipulated to a reduction to $60,000 "because the building is undergoing major reconstruction and foundation leveling, temporarily reducing marketability."

The owner of a triplex in Millbrae won a reduction from $159,000 in appraised value to $133,000.

Appraiser John Lundquist asserted, "The roof was built improperly and does not allow drainage. As a result, water standing on the roof has leaked through. County engineers report that the roof structures is dangerous during a storm and may collapse. To correct this problem, the entire roof will, in all probability, have to be replaced."

One San Matean has a good roof over his head, but an elevator in his home.

So Appraiser Murphy agreed to a $7,000 reduction in appraised value to $180,000 "recognize a possibly limited market for certain improvements within the building, e.g., the elevator."

Another San Matean may have been perplexed when her 70-year-old house was reassessed to a $127,000 appraised value. She won a $7,000 reduction from the appeals assessment board because of house needs in plumbing, building and wiring.

A Half Moon Bay ranch had an unusual characteristic.

Occasional storm flooding causes cumulative water damage to structures.

So the assessor's office agreed to a reduction in appraised value from $219,400 to $179,400.

There also is hope for residents who front a busy street.

One resident of Sharon Road in Menlo Park has a home which despite its location, had been raised in assessment 104 percent from 1973 to 1977.

It's when he got a $92,000 appraised value that he took his case to hearing officer Carl Ward.

Ward ruled, "The house fronts on a busy street, the entrance to Sharon Road. The house is older than comparables. Testimony indicates probably termite damage. The furnace and appliances are old. The house is 196 feet off of Alameda de las Pulgas. Traffic and business influence . . ." He reduced the appraised value to $88,000.

And finally, another "winner" was an Autherton woman. Appraiser John Lundquist agreed to a reduction in appraised value from $142,400 to $115,000 because periodic flooding had caused such settlement, that her house was overwhelmed with cracks.

"Sliding doors are difficult to operate, and one bathtub is pulling from the wall," Lundquist said.

Some losers:

One home on Alameda de las Pulgas in San Mateo is subject to damage because of its location near Aragon High School and a bus stop.

But hearing officer Robert Levy was unimpressed.

"My property has been subject to continuing damage over the past several years," the resident wrote in trying to have her appraised value reduced from $88,000 to $70,000. "Neither the police nor the school can spare the manpower to control the students.

"The bus company refuses to change the bus stop in spite of numerous appeals and meetings," she added. "Realtors have informally estimated that I would not be able to sell the property for more than $70,000,"

But Levy ruled, "The sales in comparable area shows that this property is assessed fairly by the assessor, even though a bus stop seems to be a hindrance and some damage to property does exist."

A South San Franciscan wasn't happy with the reappraisal to $127,000 of his eight-unit apartment.

He wanted a reduction to $95,000 "because the appraisal doesn't take into account the age of the building and all but one of the properties used for comparison are much newer."

The assessment appeals board disagreed.

John Horgan

At Home, Doing Nothing Isn't All That Easy

The idea of doing absolutely nothing has always had a certain appeal for most of us.

This has nothing to do with becoming some kind of aberrant, late-blooming flower child.

Nor does it bear on any sort of inward-looking effort to find oneself.

No, doing nothing is an art, something that too many of us can't even perceive of, let alone accomplish with any degree of grace or style.

I have long yearned to see if I could creatively exist in a vacuum.

The trouble was that there was always some reason to quash such a nebulous plan.

There is also another problem for the devoted seeker of total blahs: there are zealous people around who hate it when you are observed doing nothing.

It's difficult to be constructively lazy when everyone near you is a busy product of the work ethic.

I tried to spend several weeks doing as little as possible recently and it turned into a dismal failure.

I even had a good excuse. I couldn't do much because I was recuperating from surgery. What better time to lounge about in a splendid state of flaccid irresponsibility?

I was wrong.

Nothing bothers the righteous like the person undergoing Kafka's existential collapse, even when the apparent deterioration is going to be temporary.

These folks can't abide the guy who is dedicated to ennui. He is regarded as being seditious by definition. He is dangerous, perhaps more troublesome than your average social affliction.

Just ask my wife.

By the end of the first relatively carefree week, a period of marvelous lolling about, of flaunting my tattered jammies at anyone who dared enter my room, she announced that the bum upstairs could at least fold the laundry, cast or no cast.

"Hey," she blurted one evening as I tried to catch a couple of elusive winks before dinner, "I've got five stale loads of clothing down here. Do you think you might be able to rouse yourself out of your pathetic stupor and help me fold them?"

"I'll have to check my calendar first," I replied, attempting to inject a bit of levity in the proceedings. "You never know, I may have an important appointment during the Yogi Bear reruns."

"You've got an appointment, all right. And it's going to be with a marriage counselor if you don't sit up straight, shave for the first time in four days and pretend to have a pulse rate."

"But I tell you, I could be in demand."

"You're in demand. You're in the running for Deadbeat of the Decade. And nobody else is even close. Jack Kerouac is starting to look good compared to you."

"But what about my leg? It's still swollen. The stitches aren't even out yet."

"Look if you don't change position in that bed sometime in the next day or so, I'll take out the stitches myself. With a fork. You might even require some new ones in some other part of that flabby form of yours."

"Okay, lay the clothes on me, Attila."

That's the way things went for nearly a month. The only place where no one bugged me about anything at all was in the blessed hospital.

At Mills Memorial, no one expects the patients to be terribly active. There, the philosophy of the catheter is a way of life.

I would have stayed there longer but my wife reminded me that, "You're paying to sit here and vegetate like a stale kumquat. You can do that at home."

I wouldn't put money on that.

No 'Scare Tactic Budget' Made Up

Samuel Chandler

In the wake of Proposition 13 letters and comments are piling up knee high. It seems that no one can think of anything else.

"Mr. Chandler," someone writes, "have you prepared your scare tactic budget?"

THIS SPRING, I have prepared four budgets for the Daly City Public Library as follows: As for a normal year, at 70 percent reduction, at 60 percent reduction and at 50 percent reduction. But I did not prepare them to scare anyone. I presented them to the city manager, who is already scared of what will happen if the city loses its major source of funding.

"Is it true," writes L.M., "that as a department head you have seven secretaries?"

No, it is not true! I have a Library Assistant III who works as a secretary for two commissions as well as for me. I don't know of anyone in local government who has seven secretaries. The budgets of government agencies are of public record. Please consult them before accepting such ricidulous charges.

A TELEPHONE caller said, "Everybody knows that the number of government employees is increasing by the thousands. We've got to stop that."

No, not everybody. There are some people in our society who are not so grossly misinformed. They have presence of mind enough to consult authorities before they speak and before they vote for foolish measures.

Such sources as the 1977 Municipal Yearbook are prepared to keep citizens informed. On the subject of government employees it reads: "In contrast to the reported increase in state and federal government . . . city employment has been leveling off, and in some functional areas has been decreasing over the last four years." These words come from Section E, which is entitled "Municipal Administration and Employment." Reading it should be mandatory for the rattlebrains who speak without knowing the facts.

"If the number of employees is not increasing," someone may ask, "why does local government cost more than it did five or ten years ago?"

THERE ARE many reasons — inflation, rising costs of supplies and materials, more efficient but more costly methods. One of the chief reasons is discussed by the Municipal Yearbook in a section that contains this paragraph:

"Even with a decrease in employment, payroll and fringe benefit expenditures which comprise approximately 70 percent or 80 percent of a city's budget may still rise. Wage and fringe benefits, contractual obligations, standard promotional salary increases, cost of living and inflationary increases, and increased union demands may be responsible for this phenomenon."

This statement from the Municipal Yearbook supports a statement made by a union member from San Mateo County. "Of course it costs more. Municipal employees have just begun to receive benefits that became traditional for people in the private sector."

"Look," said a lady I met at a reception after a concert. "I have only been to the library two times in two years. Why should I pay taxes to keep it running?"

SUCH THINKING is frightening, indeed. Shall we dismantle the Fire Department because her house has not burned down in the last three years? Besides, reports indicate that her husband uses the library to obtain information about his hobbies. Furthermore, her children are enrolled in a program that makes extensive use of the public library.

"I know it's not local government that's wasteful," said a brother with whom I had lunch, "but we have to get the message to the head man in Sacramento."

The foolishness of this statement is evident. You don't like it because the father eats so much so you kill his child who works for you.

"I KNOW it's a poor bill," writes someone named Jim, "but we have to start somewhere."

A poor bill makes a poor law.

In the words of the League of Women Voters, "If Proposition 13 is passed, it will create chaos in California — disruption of services, extensive and costly litigation, and uncertainty, which would be harmful to the state's economy. Proposition 8, along with the Behr Bill, will provide needed property tax relief, revenue replacement, and continuity in services we all depend on,"

ESAA Grant

Battle Lines In DC Dispute

Clear battle lines were drawn Wednesday night between the Jefferson Elementary School District Board of Trustees and Latino groups over the fate of a $1,343,635 federal education grant and the pending demotion of the principal of George Washington School.

The heated exchange was over whether a federal Emergency School Aid Act grant, which the district has received annually for the past three years, had been killed by a March 27 letter from the Latinos to the official in charge in Washington, D.C., and what that had to do with the demotion to classroom teacher of Elvinia DeGarmo. Mrs. DeGarmo has been Washington principal the past three years.

The argument, involving mainly Trustee Beverly K. Forrester and Julius G. Castelan, 862 Bellevue Ave., Daly City, and Mel Tafoya, 144 Werner Ave., Daly City, local Latino leaders, centered around the motivation for the letter to Jesse Jordan, chief of the Bureau of Elementary and Secondary Education of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare Office of Education.

Most of the money would be for teachers and aides for the minority education programs, she and others of the board insisted, with "very few administrators."

Castelan angrily claimed credit for the letter killing the grant application.

CASH PRIZE WINNER

Westmoor High School senior Mario Dominguez receives a cash award at the finals of Bank of America's 1978 Achievement Awards May 11 at the San Francisco Hilton. Dominguez, right, won $250 as a runner-up in the liberal arts study field. Presenting the check is Bank of America Executive Vice President Marty Elenbaas.

Ram-blings

By STEVE KAUFMAN

It's been a hard week at Westmoor High School for almost all of the students. The absolutely beautiful weather we've had has made studying a chore. The cafeteria during lunchtimes has been nearly empty. Most of the students are outside on the lawns playing Frisbee or enjoying the sun. Hope this trend keeps up!

Westmoor had its annual Spring Elections May 15. As with the last election, the halls were dotted with signs endorsing a certain candidate. The voting turnout was very good and the election results were in that day.

THE STUDENT body officers for the fall semester are: Angela Rizzo, president; Kris Tong, vice president; Antoinette LaBruzzo, secretary; Rachel Bille, treasurer; myself as commissioner of publicity; Demetrice Shorter, commissioner of clubs; Mike Montes, rally commissioner; and Sally McMillan, parliamentarian.

Jerry Zarate and Eric Dew also had run for vice president; Kathy Bolton for commissioner of clubs; and Sue Starin for parliamentarian. Thanks to these candidates for taking their time to run and get involved.

The candidates' speeches were done differently for this election. As has been done in the past fall election speeches, these oratories are mandatory. The entire freshmen, sophomore and junior classes were assembled in the large gym, each during a different period in the day.

HERE, they heard the candidates speak. This is an effective means of getting more students to vote during lunchtimes, and it worked, judging by the turnout.

The voting also was handled differently. Rather than have the students on the Executive Board hand-count the ballots it was done by computer. Each candidate was given a computer number and the voter filled in the particular number on a computer card. These cards, in turn, were fed into a computer, which tallied the votes. This reduced the chance for error and provided a faster way to tally the votes.

The cheerleaders and pom-pon girls and mascots were chosen at the elctions also.

THE WINNERS are: Cheerleaders, Kim Erler, Bonnie McMillan, Maureen Noonan, Debie Williams and Janis Wisherop. The pom-pon girls for next year are Cory Beckman, Trudy Constantinos, Leslie Cooper, Lori Guisti, Caroline Lubbe and Janet McCarthy. The two mascots are Lisa Braski and Lisa Carrell. Thanks to Lily Matias and Venessa Pinkston for trying out, and congratuations to all of the winners.

Congratulations to Mario Dominguez, a senior who will be graduate in June. Mario had been selected as the Most Outstanding Student in the field of Liberal Arts by Bank of America. He was presented with a $250 check as a runner-up in the finals competition. Mario, who has an excellent academic record, has been active in tennis as well as several of Westmoor's clubs. Congragulations for winning this fine award and best of luck to you.

With Westmoor's annual Senior Ball-Junior Prom only two days away, students who are going are getting excited. One can hardly walk down the hall without hearing "What color is your dress?" or "where shall I take her for dinner?" I sincerely hope all who go have a great time.

ONE ITEM associated with the prom was offered at Westmoor. Prom flowers, corsages and boutonieres were offered for 20 percent off the retail price. There was a catalog in the main office with pictures and numbers of the flowers offered. Once a student decided on which flower he or she wanted, they filled out a purchase order slip.

A window was opened up in the main office Monday and Tuesday. Here, several students took the flower orders and accepted payment for them. The flowers will be delivered to school this Friday, the day of the prom. Students can pick them up in the office from 9:45 a.m. to 2 p.m. The flowers, being handled by Karen Zins and Larry Nielson, are a handy budget-saver. Thanks for your work on this project.

Students in the school's chapter of the California Scholarship Federation teamed up with the Youth Elderly Service Club and went on a joint field trip to McNear's Beach May 18. Students relaxed in the sun, played tennis, swam or played basketball. I really enjoyed myself.

Studying Has Become a Chore

SEVERAL happenings took place recently at Westmoor concerning seniors. First, May 19 was officially titled "Senior Cut Day," in which all students in the senior class were allowed to take a day off from school. Hope all who "cut" had a good time.

Seniors who ordered graduation announcements can pick them up from Mrs. Charles in Room 14. Those who wish to purchase them can do so at a price of 3 for $1. Thanks to Mrs. Charles for all of her dedicated work for the senior class.

Also, any seniors who owe library fines are urged to clear them and get them paid soon. If you are in doubt whether you have been fined, check the list posted in the library and main office.

WESTMOOR students recently formed a new club right as baseball season got under way. The club, called the Jack Clard-Joe Ferguson Fan Club, is led by presidents Clark Bloom and Len Chiechi. To celebrate this club's formation, the members sent to a Giants game at Candlestick Park and were surprised as they received a welcome from the Giants on the scoreboard.

Westmoor has a new campus supervisor. Charles Sturdevant. He will patrol the school and keep an eye on things. Good luck at your new job.

Girl Scouting

Mrs. Hilda Heagney will receive a pin denoting 35 years of Girl Scout membership at the annual Daly City Area Girl Scout Association luncheon Thursday at noon at the Southern Table in South San Francisco.

Mrs. Heagney, a former neighborhood chairman, camp director, etc., has been active in Girl Scouting throughout those 35 years.

Mrs. Dolores Riggs, who began Scouting as a Brownie with Mrs. Heagney, and is active today in adult capacities, will receive her 25-year pin.

Twnety-year pins will be presented to Mmes. Mary Ann Dale, Zella Heneise and Fran Goldberg.

Fifteen-year pins will be presented to Mrs. Norma Young and Miss Sue Scaduto.

Twenty-year pins will be presented to Mmes. Bunne Pardini, Sally Raeta, Joan Passanisi and Jacki Plichcik and Misses Cheryl Figone, Michelle Rushton, Karen Dale, Nanette Futrell, Michyle Lapedis, Sue McDowell, Theresa Clark, Mariane Galvin, Robin Raeta, Karen Schwarzbach and Karen Rodgers.

BART Eyes 'Tail Track'

As a further step toward improving train service, BART is planning to construct a short extension of track beyond the Daly City station to improve train turn-back capabilities. The Daly City station now is the terminal point for the transit system's San Francisco line.

Extensive testing over the past year has indicated the current track configuration at the Daly City Station may make it difficult to reduce train intervals below 3.5 minutes, a spokesman said. Ultimately BART hopes to reduce train intervals between San Francisco and the East Bay to two minutes, he added.

The proposed project calls for building a "tail track" to extend beyond the station by about 6,000 feet. The additional track also would generate an operating cost savings by providing storage space for extra off-peak trains which now have to be taken back to the East Bay for storage. The ability to store the extra trains at Daly City could result in significant savings in car miles, reducing labor and power costs, he said.

What would the odds have been in March for the two embattled Bay Area teams to be the winningest teams in their respective leagues (as this is written), even as early as late May? Would you have bet it? Of course not. That's what makes for long odds. Nobody bets them.

The Giants and A's may force me to revise my own personal truism that pitching is over-rated; that it's very possible that pitching is nowhere near even 75 percent of baseball, but maybe only 50-50. Look at the hitting stats in both leagues and you'll find the Giants and A's near the bottom in most categories. But they both have their league's best ERA's and, of course, the best winning percentages.

EVERYTHING, at this point, is working for the Giants. Even the weather, when they've arrived home, has been superb; much better than even during the drought years. When you're hot, you're hot — and I think there's a pun intended somewhere in there.

And are you still wondering, as I have been since I wrote it here last fall, how San Diego's lefthander, Bob Shirley, beat out Bob Knepper as Rookie Pitcher of the Year last season? This isn't second-guessing, just because Knepper is going great this season and Shirley has been having trouble getting past the third inning. The point is, as I took pains to record in this space in September, Knepper had a superior record to Shirley's even LAST year.

RUMOR DEPT: There are two versions to this story. One is that Joe Altobelli asked John Montefusco to go to the bullpen as a short relief man (the thinking being that he's a natural because he throws hard and throws strikes), and that The Count told him to stuff it. The second version is that Altobelli asked Montefusco to go to the pen as a long reliefer, and that The Count told him to stuff it.

Actually, I'm not sure I believe either version, simply because Montefusco is worth too much to management as a drawing card. Relief pitchers don't draw crowds.

There's only one version to this one. The Cardinals are interested in Lynn McGlothen (again), especially after those five nearly flawless innings he threw against them the Sunday Jim Barr was thrown out of the game in the first inning.

CHECKING the St. Louis roster, there's only one player they have who isn't a star (you don't get a star for McGlothen at this point) but who could help the Giants. That's Roger Freed, the big outfielder-first baseman who hit .390 for them last year pinch-hitting and now doing some platooning. He's not very fancy in the field or on the bases, but for years he's had great minor league slugging stats, and for the first time in his career, last season, began displaying some of the ability with the bat many baseball people always have suspected he's had. The Giants need another outfielder — perhaps, desperately (pray that not ONE regular at ANY position gets hurt for too long) — and preferably a power hitter. Even more preferably, a right-handed power hitter.

ACCORDING to The Sporting News, the 49ers and Raiders came up with excellent drafts. Before drafting began, the Sporting News published ratings on all the top college players, supposedly based on a composite of NFL scouting reports.

According to the Sporting News ratings, five of the first eight 49er picks rate among the best in the country, including two players who were rated the best at their positions in the nation, one a second best and one a third best.

Although the Raiders, of course, picked much lower in the draft, seven of their first eight picks were given high ratings in the Sporting News. Ironically, their top pick, defensive end Dave Browning from Washington, wasn't rated at all.

FOLLOWING is what the Sporting News "scouting reports" had to say about the respective top picks of the 49ers and Raiders:

The top 49er pick, tight and Ken McAfee of Notre Dame, was called the best collegiate tight end in the country. "Blocks like a tank and still finds time to get open for passes; a marvelous weapon."

Second pick Dan Bunz, middle linebacker from Long Beach State, was called the second best linebacker in the country, behind only USC's Clay Matthews, who the 49ers originally were interested in. "He's bulky enough to play in the middle and quick enough to move outside."

Walt Downing, an offensive guard-center from Michigan, was the 49ers' third pick and was called the best center in the country by The Sporting News. "His 6-3, 255-pound frame should fit nicely into a pro line one of these days."

ERNIE HUGHES, offensive guard from Notre Dame, picked fourth by the 49ers, was TSN third choice. "He moved up on lists on the basis of his post-season work."

Elliott Walker, the running back from Pittsburgh picked eighth, got a sort of honorable mention by TSN.

Fifth 49er pick Terry Lecount wasn't mentioned, but probably only because he was a running quarterback for Florida who will be used as a wide receiver and kick returner.

Archie Reese, defensive tackle from Clemson, and Bruce Threadgill, defensive back from Mississippi State, were not rated.

RAIDER second pick Derrick Jensen, fullback from Texas-Arlington, was rated fourth best at his position by The Sporting News. "Not a spectacular type, but he sneaks up on you with his slashing running and good receiving. His 4.8 speed isn't bad for a 6-1, 230-pounder."

Wide receivers Joe Stewart and Mike Levenseller were ranked relatively high by the Sporting News in what is apparently a bumper year for that position. Stewart, picked fifth by the Raiders, was ranked 11th, while Levenfeller, Oakland's eighth pick, was ranked ninth.

SAID THE Sporting News of Missouri's Stewart, "at times he looked like a great prospect, other times he left something to be desired."

Of Washington State's Levenseller they said "Has good speed, excellent concentration and ability to get open."

Third pick Lindsey Mason (offensive tackle, Kansas), fourth choice Maurice Harvey (defensive back, Ball State), sixth pick Derrick Ramsey (a running quarterback from Kentucky who will be shifted to tight end) and seventh pick Tom Davis (center, Nebraska) were given special mention by the paper.

LOCAL NOTES: Jefferson High School senior Glenn Dean has broken the school's record for blocks, with 11.

Dean, who, along with twin brother Gill has broken all sorts of distance running records (Gill is a block or two behind Glenn) has won his blocks in track, tennis and cross country.

San Francisco State wide receiver Tony Watson has been signed as a free agent by the Seattle Seahawks.

Baseball trivia question of the week: Who is the oldest catcher in the big leagues?

Give up? It's Elrod Hendricks of Baltimore, who is 37.

Next week I'll ask who the oldest shortstop is. Be ready.

The Victors

Local athletes fared well at the Region I track and field championships at College of San Mateo Friday. At far left, Darryl Jones of Serramonte wins the 220 — he won four gold medals to lead Regents to team title — with Hillsdale's Mike Lawyer, left, finishing third. In upper left, Terra Nova's Randy Peterson hits the tape first in the 440 with a fine 49.1 clocking, one of the best marks of the meet. Top right, Hillsdale hurdler Steve Sykes wins the 330 low hurdles in 37.9. Sykes lost the high hurdles and wasn't satisfied with his time in the lows. He has his sights set on the tough SPAL competition in next weekend's CCS meet. Above, Glenn Dean of Jefferson High broke away from this two-mile pack to win, while Serra High's Jim Rochford (right) finished second.

Incredible Marks

Regents Win CCS

By JOHN MURPHY

The Central Coast Section Region I track and field finals held at College of San Mateo's sweltering-hot oval Friday will not be remembered for its incredible marks nor record-breaking performances.

The heat wave which blanketed the Bay Area in recent days took a lot of oomph out of most people's efforts. Many times were not as rapid as observers speculated they would be, and several favorites were upset.

But while runners were taking the gas in the Sahara-like climate, two individuals were able to excel with gritty, inspirational performances.

Serramonte sprinter Darryl Jones paced his team to a meet victory (the Regents scored 96 points to outdistance second-place St. Ignatius with 76) by winning four gold medals.

Jones captured the 100- and 220-yard dashes and anchored both Serramonte relay teams to victory by making up huge deficits on the final leg with gutty bursts of speed.

Meanwhile, another North Peninsula League performer — Jefferson's Glenn Dean — captured the two-mile run with a fantastic kick on the final lap. He then competed in the mile (completing a grueling double) and came virtually from out of nowhere in the last 440 to place fourth (good enough to make Friday's CCS meet at San Jose City College).

Jones, after catching SI's anchor man in the 440 relay to win that event in 43.3, and sweeping both sprints, didn't really think that Serramonte could pull an upset in the mile relay.

But he surprised himself (and just about everybody in the sun-baked stands) by making up about 12 yards on Mills' Rick Escobar on the final leg to win the race with a final lunge at the tapes.

That was just about all that Jones could take for the day. He collapsed after the finish, and nobody could really blame him.

"I didn't think we'd have a chance, I really didn't," panted Jones, moments after the race had concluded. "But I knew I'd have something left, 'cause my 220 wasn't that quick. I started my kick into the turn and just caught him," he said.

"I felt like I was wearin' lead boots going to that finish line," he added. "My legs felt like they were about to fall off."

It didn't look that way from the stands. Jones ran the final lap in 48.6.

Sophomore Eric Jones also had a great deal to do with the victory. He ran the opening leg in 51.0.

"I think I can do better," Jones added, "and I think that Chico (Lewis) can improve his time by a half a second or may be a second. But there's no guarantee that we'll run this fast again. And it'll take a low 3:21 to put us in the State meet."

Dean, who ran just the two-mile two years ago in Region I, but played tennis last year instead of going out for track (and was a league champion), was happy that he attempted the mile also this time around.

"I regretted it when I was a sophomore and didn't run the mile," Dean said. "I felt sick after the two-mile, but I guess it was just a case of mind over matter.

"It's a weird feeling," he added. "I never thought I could do it. It's like a dream. I've always respected guys who could make the finals in two events, and all of the sudden here I am.

"Of course, it does mean another week of training. I'm sort of getting a case of seniorities. I don't want to work that hard at schoolwork or anything else. But I won't give up on track."

After seeing Dean's performance Friday, it's hard to picture him giving up on anything. On the gunlap of the mile he was in 10th place, but steadily moved up in the pack to get fourth in an inspiring finish.

One of the biggest upsets of the day was Westmoor half miler Kurt Larcher's defeating highly-touted Mills 880 man Rick Escobar (who has the second best time in the CCS).

Larcher topped his personal best by three full seconds as he ran a 1:56.8 to beat Escobar's 1:57.5.

Ironically, Larcher has little experience running the half mile, having competed as a 100 and quarter mile man until, as he puts it, "I failed at both."

Commented Larcher, who has only run the 880 about five times before Region I, "I really don't know how to run it yet, but I've improved my times every time out.

"I give all of the credit to my coach Greg Alvarado. He trained me. He gave me plenty of bad times and plenty of good times, and they both helped me. My coach got me here, not myself."

Alvarado certainly must be doing something right. Last year another Westmoor half miler (Jeff Maxwell) finished sixth in the state in the 880 and excited fans with his last-ditch, go-for-broke final kicks.

"Jeff is one of the best runners I've known," Larcher said. "I've always looked up to him. He had a unique type of running style that made track exciting."

Escobar, meanwhile, was disappointed but still confident about the upcoming CCS meet.

"Everybody gets beat," he said. "I didn't think anybody would be with me here. I wasn't psyched up today. But I'm not going to let myself run slow next week."

Escobar was still doing double workouts last week and also worked out the day before the meet, but refused to blame that for his sub-par performance. "I'll just be more up for it next time. Being beat just makes me want it that much more," he commented.

Steve Sykes, Hillsdale's excellent hurdler-sprinter who won four golds a week ago in the Mid-Peninsula League finals, didn't enjoy a banner day (for him), but still managed to win the 330 low hurdles, took a third in the 120 highs and anchored the Knights mile relay team to a fourth place-finish (they dropped the baton).

Sykes' efforts helped Hillsdale to a third-place finish in the meet behind Serramonte and SI.

"I hit too many hurdles coming down the stretch (in the 330's)," commented Sykes. "I haven't been too worried about the lows. I've mainly been working on the highs, and my steps just aren't like they should be," he explained.

Tigers Survive Scare

It might be difficult to convince a casual observer that Westmoor High's baseball team is a top-notch nine.

But it might be even harder to convince Terra Nova and El Camino otherwise.

After halting powerful North Peninsula League round robin champion El Camino's 13-game win streak in the first round of the NPL Shaughnessey playoffs, Westmoor gave host Terra Nova a big scare Friday, but in the end ran out of miracles, dropping an exciting 4-3 contest.

Terra Nova's battery of pitcher Mike Diaz and catcher Kurt Warford almost single-handedly put an end to Westmoor's season.

Teachers Wanted Debate

Two South San Francisco Unified School District teachers confronted the Board of Trustees last week, demanding that the board debate them on Proposition 13, the Jarvis-Gann initiative.

Robert Gahl and James Lynch, representing a small teacher organization called South City Teachers, criticized the district for not having any contingency plans should Prop. 13 be approved June 6. But, they claimed the schools "could teach just as well with less money."

Both teachers called for cuts in administrative, classified and other non-teaching personnel and the redirection of all available funds directly into the classroom.

"I've long believed," Gahl told trustees, "that it would be more ethical to ask less money of the taxpayers for the quality of education we provide, and I've also believed that education would be vastly improved if we simplified it."

Gahl charged that schools have a number of personnel "who needlessly and uselessly complicate matters."

He also called for the elimination of counseling, coordinating, psychology and nursing positions as well as three assistant superintendent posts.

An angry trustee, Thomas Hinckle, said, "I think we are truly blessed that these men have come down from the mount of stone and told us how to run our school district."

Before any further discussion ensued, Chairwoman Pat Hilliard ended the meeting and trustees adjourned to an executive session.

Pacifica Wants More Info

The Pacifica City Council directed its staff Monday night to seek additional bids on the preparation of a report for the city's secondary sewage treatment plant.

At a previous council meeting, Albert St. Cyr, director of Community Development and Services, had recommended that the council accept Consoer-Townsend Associates' bid of $21,000 to $30,000 to prepare the report.

The report is necessary to keep state funds flowing into the construction of the secondary sewage treatment plant.

St. Cyr pointed out that the state wouldn't make payments beyond 80 percent of the total grant for the plant until the report was incorporated into municipal ordinances.

Although the city had received about 70 percent of its grant at the time of the last council meeting, the council directed its staff to seek other bids.

At the Monday night meeting, they learned that one company, Civil, Sanitary and Ocean Engineering International, Inc., of Concord, had bid $10,000 to prepare the report.

Engineering Science bid $28,750 and Resources Engineering and Management bid $11,500 to $14,800.

Questioned by the council about the discrepancy in the figures, St. Cyr replied that perhaps the companies envisioned preparing projects of different scopes.

He said smaller companies may be able to do jobs for less money because they have less overhead.

Councilwoman Eleanor McGuire pointed out that the lowest bidder, CSO International, stated in a letter that its bid took for granted that preliminary work done by Consoer-Townsend did not need revision.

Puzzled about what the company's $10,000 bid covers, compared to the other bidders, Mrs. McGuire suggested that all three bidders be asked to prepare contract proposals.

But Councilman Stanley Farber said he was worried about the pending cut-off of state funding.

City Manager Donald Weidner explained that Pacifica has received 76 percent of its grant to date.

The council voted unanimously to direct its staff to draw up a contract with the low bidder and to bring it back for approval as soon as possible.

If a contract can't be hammered out with the low bidder, the council agreed that the staff should try to arrange one with the next lowest bidder.

Salute to Captain Charles' Seafood

Scampi and Steak (with fine herbs) is a once-a-week special feature at CAPTAIN CHARLES, a gourmet seafood house in Rockaway Beach, Pacifica. This tasty dish combines Iceland lobster tails and top sirloin steak served with fried rice and garlic bread.....A "no subsitution" policy does not exist at LA PINATA Mexican restaurant in downtown Burlingame. The owners here feel that guests should be able to complement their meals according to appetite. Enjoy yourselves as they enjoy serving you, is their motto.....SCOTTY CAMPBELL'S, now under the ownership of former 49ers linebacker JIM SNAIDECKI, is a popular rendezvous for sports celebs and fans alike.....The salad bar at LEHR'S GREENHOUSE in San Francisco is so elaborate that most patrons think of it as a 22-course feast. Included are delectable items such as Shrimps in Aspic, Apple Salad, Julienned Ham and Turkey and five wonderful salad dressings. The salad you create is limited only by your imagination.....Two selections are included under the heading of "surf and turf" at LITTLE JOE'S FISH FACTORY, Redwood City. Served as complete dinners, they offer a choice of Crab Legs and Top Sirloin for under $10, and Lobster and Top Sirloin for under $11 . . . FINOCCHIO'S in San Francisco has been in the business of making your entertainment evening one to remember for a long time. Saucy routines by the EVE-ETTES intrigue audiences as they sing and dance in fascinating costumes. Four revues nightly, except Mondays . . . To insure the consistent quality of the cuisine at VINCE'S Italian and Seafood restaurant, each of the entrees is cooked to order. There are house specialties such as the delectable Roast Chicken and Polenta (Sunday's special) and the chefs are particularly expert with Veal Scaloppini and Chicken Cacciatore. Luncheon specials served Mondays through Fridays, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

SHARES JOKE

Humorist Victor Borge, Denmark's great musical entertainer, shares a joke with Bill Monro, the "Mayor of Geary Street," and beautiful singer Marylyn Mulvey at Rosebud's English Pub in San Francisco.

Phil Lehr's for Steak and Seafood

PHIL LEHR'S STEAKERY in San Francisco, nationally famous for superb Pay-By-Ounce steak dinners, is also the home of some of the Bay Area's best seafood. Try their Salmon Wellington or Broiled Lobster Tails for an unforgettable dining treat.....Everyone was laughing it up at the NEW SAN REMO in San Francisco's North Beach the other evening when two of the funniest guys in the business, comedians Cleavon Little ("Blazing Saddles") and Bob Levine ("Sly Fox"), stopped by for cocktails. Just about the time everything was settling back to normal, in walked comic Jackie Gayle, who had the place rocking with laughter again.....Baked Manicotti (macaroni with sauteed meat and Italian seasonings) and Baked Lasagne are popular sellers at ROMANO'S, Rockaway Beach, Pacifica. Both are served with salad and French bread. "A day without wine is like a day without sunshine," says ENRICO ROMANO'S menu. So keep that in mind when ordering.....Business is moving right along," said MEL CICERO, "top banana" at the BAYHILL LOUNGE, San Bruno. The TRI SOUNDS, who have been playing the "Top 40" sounds for dancing for almost three years, continue to draw big audiences . . . NORM LARSON'S KING'S TABLE in Redwood City is a great place to bring the family for luncheon or dinner before or after a day at nearby Marine World/Africa U.S.A. Casual dress is perfectly okay, and the prices for the lavish all-you-can-eat buffet are supermodest.
